MANUSCRIPTS IN PREPERATION

- Bedri, A., Haynes, M., Kosaraju, R.P., Grover, I., Li, R., Starner, T., and Abowd, G. (2016). "Earbit: Detecting eating activities in the wild". (To be submitted to UbiComp 2016).

Contributions: Pre-processing sensor data, visualizing and analyzing data to extract features, and building a machine learning model to detect eating activities.

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Georgia Tech, Atlanta, USA August 2015 – Present
Undergraduate Research Assistant, Contextual Computing Group

- Researching under Dr. Thad Starner on eating activity recognition using supervised machine learning on sensor data from modified off-the-shelf wearables. Food journaling has numerous health benefits and automatic identification of eating activities facilitates this.

Georgia Tech, Atlanta, USA August 2015 – Present
Undergraduate Research Assistant, Design and Intelligence Lab

- Researching under Dr. Ashok Goel on efficient case retrieval and mapping approaches for visual analogy problems, with the intention of utilizing this case based reasoning approach to allow robots to perform previously taught tasks in a new environment.
